Defessus, a, um, p. ex defetiscor qd v. Wearie.

D * Dēfĕtiscor, ĕris, essus, ex de & fatiscor. Ter. To be wearie. de huius verbi præterito inter Grammaticos non convenit. Prisciannus vult esse defessus sum, sicuti a fatiscor fessus sum. contra Diomedes fessus & defessus nomina esse vult, non participia: cuius sententia videtur verisimilior. Neque enim fessus aut defessus tempus vllum importat more participiorum neque actionem aut possessionem, sed idem omnino significat quod lassus, quod certe nomen esse nemo dubitat. Differunt autem hæc duo à participio fatigatus, sicut calidus & calefactus, quorum hoc & & tempus & passionem significat illud solam qualitatem. Sic fatigatus dicitur ille quem res aliqua fatigavit: fessus autem & defessus sim, liciter qui labore deficit: vnde compositum indefessus, idem quod indefatigabilis. verba autem fatiscor & defatiscor, in vsu non sunt, sed eorum loco vtimur verbo neutro fatisco, quod est eiusdem significationis. To be weary or faint.

D * Deficio, is, fēci, fectum, ficĕre. ficiens. Deficit socius: patronus deserit. Donat. To faile, to lacke, to cease, to fall from, to forsake, to be wearie, to decay, to faint. aliquando acc. vt dies me deficeret.

† Deficiscor, Gloss. idem qd defetiscor.

* Dēfīgo, is, xi, xum, ĕre, act. acc. To strike in or fasten with nailes. to naile. ex hâc verbi significatione elegantes simul & variæ translationes existunt: vt cum aliquem dicimus pavore defixum esse aut stupore mœstitiave, transfertur etiam ad oculos & animum. To fasten the mind or eyes on any thing, to astonish, to strike through with feare, or amazement, to set vp.
